

BRENT REED // The Story

Brent Reed is a master of musical communication. His performances are mesmerizing. His writing is clever and artful, boasting multi-genre talent that's simply extra-ordinary. Blending melodic hooks, haunting piano riffs, and soaring guitars, Brent's original mix of alternative rock married with cerebral word-smithing has been received by audiences with eager celebration.

Brent has been performing since 2000 and has been seen in concert by thousands. His music has been featured on national television. He's won more than one national songwriting award and has shared the stage with multiple nationally-acclaimed performers and artists.

Since the inception of his career, Brent has released one EP, a critically acclaimed single, and two full length albums. Brent's musical skills have taken him throughout the United States, Europe, and Central America. His eclectic style and inclusive stage presence have garnered him mass appeal wherever he's made an appearance.

Brent was born in Tempe, Arizona and was raised in Kentucky. He began playing the piano at age 9 and proficiently writing songs at age 13. Higher education later took him to Anderson University in Central Indiana where he earned a degree in Music Business. It was at school where Brent honed his songwriting and performance skills while learning the "art" of integrated marketing.

Fans of Brent Reed know that his passions lie beyond the superficial elements of song structure and prose. "I want people to connect to something beyond themselves. To step out of mundane moments and feel a 'Creative Presence' outside of the tangible. It's something listeners can actually choose to participate in as well, and that's very exciting to me!"

Currently Brent resides in beautiful Northern Kentucky where he's connected to a local body of creatives, entrepreneurs, and friends.

Brent's next full length album "All That We're Made Of" will be released in February 2010.
